MANY YOUNG PLAYERS

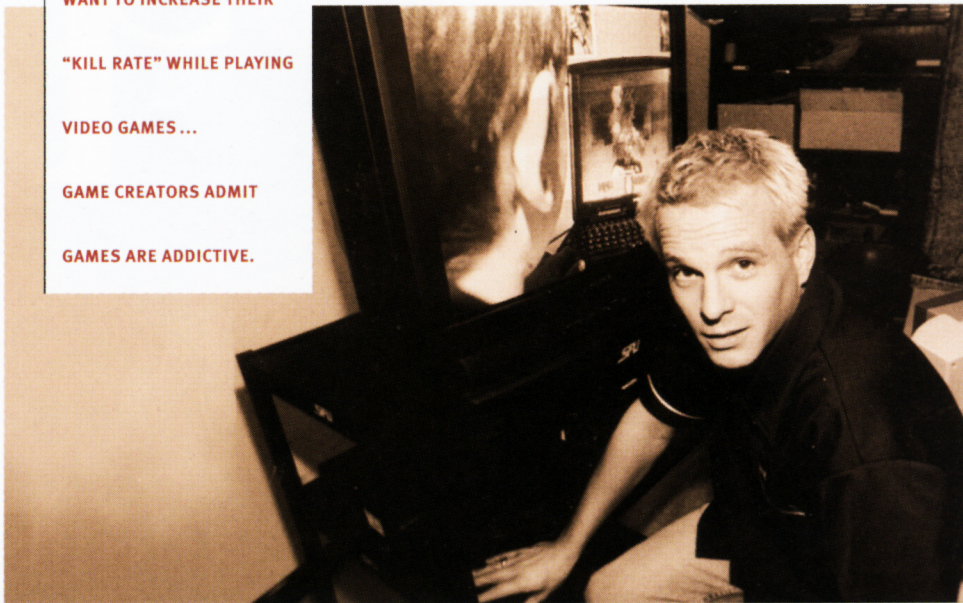

WANT TO INCREASE THEIR

"KILL RATE" WHILE PLAYING

VIDEO GAMES...

GAME CREATORS ADMIT

GAMES ARE ADDICTIVE.

VIDEO VIOLENCE Communications graduate student Brent Stafford

is creator of a 58-minute documentary, Insert Coin: The Culture of Video Game Play, which examines how video games affect young players. Stafford found many young players feel a need to increase their "kill rate" while playing. Video game creators, while admitting the games are addictive, say the activity is harmless. Stafford's film was his Master's thesis.
